'Individual Storytelling: The Adult Learning Experience'

Presented and Facilitated by Georgiana Poulter

Brief outline: Stories are effective as educational tools because they are believable, memorable and entertaining. The believability stems from the fact that stories deal with human experience which we tend to perceive as an authentic and credible source of knowledge. Stories make information more memorable because they involve us in the actions and intentions of the characters. Story telling can be a great tool for those working with adult learners.

Please come ready to actively participate in this conversation and the creative content.

AGM: 6.15pm

All members are encouraged and are most welcome to attend the AGM following the presentation.

Following the AGM, we extend a warm invitation to you and your guests to join us for a light catered meal and drinks on site.
